Could changes in Missouri's Labor Laws Affect You?

During the last Missouri legislative session, bills were filed and hearings were held that would change some of Missouri's labor laws. Those issues remain a priority for some in Jefferson City, and, dependent upon the outcome of November's elections, Missouri could find itself amidst significant change. The desire to change our labor laws will remain top of mind for a few and will not simply disappear no matter the outcome of November's elections.

Andrew Martone, President of Hesse Martone is a noted labor law attorney in St. Louis. He will analyze the impact of potential changes to Missouri's labor laws, helping your to better understand their impact on your business.
